

A GUIDE TO WHAT HANDICRAFTS ARE ALLOWED INTO AUSTRALIA & NEW ZEALAND

WOODEN ARTICLES & CARVINGS

- Plant and animal products could introduce serious pests and diseases into Australia and New Zealand, devastating their valuable agricultural industries and unique environments.
- You must declare all wooden articles & carvings on arrival in Australia and New Zealand.

Traditional wooden carvings that are free of contamination, bark and borer activity.

Wooden carvings and novelty or ornamental items made of wood with bark attached will require mandatory treatment on arrival in Australia or New Zealand at the owner's expense, or alternatively, must be re-exported or destroyed.

Other carvings and novelty or ornamental items made of wood that are free of contamination, bark and borer activity.

Wooden carvings with borer activity. Item will require mandatory treatment on arrival in Australia or New Zealand at the owner's expense, or alternatively, must be re-exported or destroyed.

 Item will be returned after inspection by Department of Agriculture (Australia)/Ministry of Primary Industries (New Zealand) staff if it is found to not pose a pest or disease risk. If a risk is identified, you may have the option to pay for the item to be treated and returned to you; pay to have the item re-exported; or have the item destroyed by the Department of Agriculture/Ministry of Primary Industries.

 Item will be detained after inspection by Department of Agriculture (Australia)/Ministry of Primary Industries (New Zealand) staff. Depending on the risk identified you may have the option to pay for the item to be treated and returned to you; pay to have the item re-exported; or have the item destroyed by the Department of Agriculture/Ministry of Primary Industries.